> Republican Senator Views the Prospect With Apprehension-Realignment of Parties On the Question of Imperialism-Gold Democrat Who Now Prefers Bryan to McKinley.

Washington, Feb. 18.-There are now nany indications that President Mc-Kinley will be forced, much against his lesire, to summon the Fifty-sixth condesire, to summon the Fifty-sixth con-gress in extraordinary session. He has already announced that he will take this course if the army bill fails, and at present it looks as if this measure was lost beyond hope of salvation in present congress.
President McKinley really sum-

If President McKinley really summons an extraordinary session of the new congress, it will be called for the 15th of March, or thereabouts—that is to say, from ten to fifteen days after the adjournment of the regular session. There is no reason to believe that the extra session will last more than thirty days. The new congress will undoubtedly respond with alacrity to whatever suggestions of legislation are made by the president's advisers. The senate will be more heavily Republican than that body has been in ten years. The house of representatives is very close, but it will be made to act prumptly under the drastic Reed rules, which have convered the one-time popular branch of congress from a representative body to a personal despotism.

"Tell me how you went about it," suggested the other.

"O. K. Fill begin at the beginning. I'd been half ill so long and was so low-spirited that it was very hard for me to laugh internally at first, though naturally I have a keen sense of humor. So I tried this plan: Every morning, an hour after breakfast, I took a two-mile wark. One day I'd stroit on Fifth avenue, again on the water front on the East or West side, and also in many other places. I kept my eyes skinned for laughable things and people, and when I saw anything amusing I stood still and laughed internally. In tendays I was another girl. Then I began to laugh internally every time I felt cold or blue, and whenever I felt cold after going to bed I could warm myself up in no time by the process. You should try it. It is the most exhibarating thing, and sends the blood leaping through the voins at a raite that would have shamed Maud S. You see, It's this way. The blood goes from the heart to the lings and back again to the least. A certain German grocery man in Brooklyn has by thrift and close attention to business become so successful that his neighbors have not failed to notice that he is constantly adding to his wealth. He recently began the erection of a block of five flar houses on lots adjoining his store. One day a friend, congratulating him on his success, said that a man who is able to erect houses in these times ought to be very happy indeed; whereupon Mr. Gostichen responded: "What's the good of money If you don't got good health?" He then related that he was just getting off a sick bed, having been laid up with a billious attack, and he added: "I don't feel good yet." A lady customer who was at the moment standing near heard what he said, She was a believer in Ripum Tabules, and happening to have some in a little handbag she was carrying, she thereupon offered him half a dinen and begged him to try them. This he promised to do. Two weeks later the same lady inquired of him how the Ripans Tabules had affected him, and he said enthusiastically; "Done are worth more to me by the dozens than anything I ever tried, and I've swallowed many stuffs for dat billiousness-dat's a good medicine and it stops by me after now,"
